BUSINESS PLAN 2027 – 2029

TWIRLER PICTURES

Building one name the audience can follow three times a week.

A growth plan for a single-performer studio: concentrate the audience on Lady Carey, industrialise a three-shoots-a-week production rhythm, and turn predictability into subscription revenue.

The thesis

Twirler Pictures does not need to be a big studio to be a profitable one. It needs to be the studio a specific audience cannot stop checking — and that only works if there is one recognisable performer releasing on a schedule nobody has to guess at.

01 Concentrate, don't diversify
One anchor performer outperforms a rotating cast at this scale. Every scene, cutdown and post points at the same name: Lady Carey.

02 Rhythm is the product
Three shoots a week, released every Saturday. Predictability is what converts a curious viewer into a renewing member — and what keeps churn measurable.

03 Shoot once, publish five times
Each shoot day yields one long-form scene, three vertical cutdowns and a photo set. The marginal cost of the extra outputs is close to zero.

04 Stay small, stay compliant
Closed sets, verified records, real age assurance. Compliance is the moat that keeps the studio its payment processor and its distribution.

PREPARED BY

Studio management, with Lady Carey as creative lead. Draft for review — figures are planning estimates, not audited accounts.

THE BET, IN ONE SENTENCE

£25k of founder capital, twelve months of disciplined weekly output and a single performer promoted harder than any competitor promotes a roster — for a business running at ~45% EBITDA and £0.5m of revenue by year three.

A saturated market with an underserved middle

Free tube sites have flattened the price of a single clip to zero. What they cannot copy is a performer with a personality, a release schedule and a reason to pay.

FREE CONTENT

Unlimited clips at zero price

Tube aggregators own discovery and pay creators a pittance. Competing on volume of free clips is a losing game for a studio of any size.

SUBSCRIPTION FATIGUE

Too many platforms, too little signal

Buyers will pay for one or two memberships at most. They pick the studio whose next release they can actually anticipate.

COMPLIANCE SQUEEZE

Processors are tightening

Age assurance and performer verification now gate access to card processing and distribution. Small operators fall out; prepared ones inherit the demand.

WHERE THE MONEY ACTUALLY SITS

Segment	Share of spend	Twirler's play
Subscription memberships	~55%	Core product: £12.99 / £19.99 tiers
Pay-per-view & bundles	~22%	Back catalogue, £6.99 per scene
Custom & commissions	~14%	£600–£1,500 per commission
Licensing & affiliate	~9%	Clip licensing rev-share

Shares reflect typical independent-studio mixes. Twirler weights memberships more heavily because a single-performer catalogue sells better as a subscription than as a series of one-off purchases.

WHY NOW

Search demand for performer-led content is stable. Supply of well-produced, compliant UK content is not. The gap is credibility plus cadence — and a one-performer studio can occupy it faster than a network can.

POSITION IN ONE LINE

Twirler is not competing with free sites for attention. It is competing with every other paid membership for a renewal — and renewals are won by the studio whose next release the buyer already expects.

One performer, promoted like a label promotes a band

Breadth is how studios compete when they have no name worth remembering. Twirler's entire strategy is the opposite bet.

THE USUAL SMALL STUDIO

- Rotating cast of ten to twenty performers
- Releases whenever footage happens to be ready
- Audience cannot name the brand
- Marketing spread across every platform at once
- No reason to renew in a quiet month

THE TWIRLER POSITION

- One anchor: Lady Carey, front and centre
- Releases every Saturday, without fail
- The name is the brand
- Marketing compounds on a single search term
- A new scene every week is the renewal pitch

THE THREE MOVES

Make her the interface

Lady Carey is not a category inside the site — she is the site. Navigation, hero, covers and email subject lines all resolve to one name.

Sell the calendar

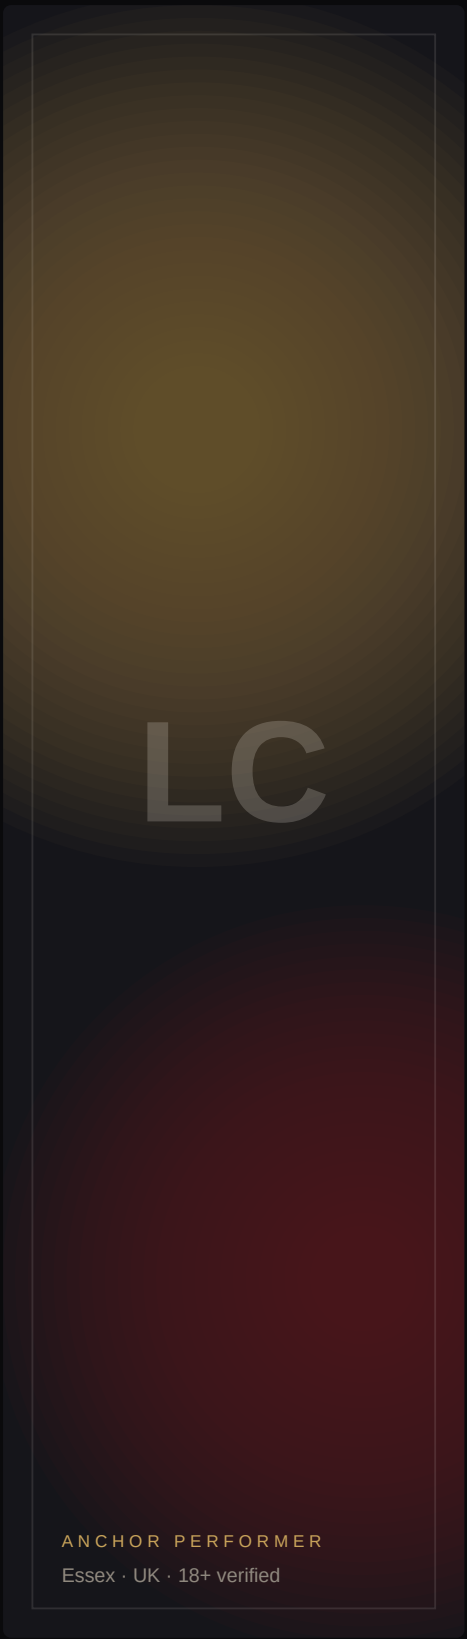

Publish the release schedule. Members buy the certainty of a Saturday drop as much as they buy the scene itself.

Publish the standard

Show how the studio runs: verified records, closed sets, real releases. It reassures buyers, processors and collaborators at once.

HOW YOU KNOW IT IS WORKING

The measurable version of this: by month twelve, more search traffic should resolve to the performer's name than to the studio's. That single ratio is the cleanest proof the positioning is working.

03 · THE ANCHOR

Lady Carey

the asset the plan is built around

Every studio has one performer the audience arrives for. Most spread that attention thin, then wonder why nobody remembers the brand. Twirler makes the anchor explicit: Lady Carey is the creative lead, the cover, the search term and the reason to renew.

WHAT SHE BRINGS

Recognisable
A consistent look and voice that survives a fifteen-second vertical cut.

Productive
Comfortable on a three-day shooting week, with a scene bank as buffer.

Editorial
Leads concept, styling and casting — the taste that differentiates the catalogue.

Commercial
Fronts commissions, customs and partner shoots at a premium rate.

ASSET PROTECTION

The plan depends on one person. Terms: profit share on memberships, first refusal on commissions, a hard maximum of four shoot days a week, and a written exit clause covering the back catalogue.

ANCHOR OUTPUT AT PLAN CADENCE

3 shoot days a week · Mon / Wed / Fri

Three shoots a week, every week

The model rests on cadence. Not three scenes a week when inspiration strikes — three shoot days on the calendar, with a scene bank absorbing the bad weeks.

THE BUFFER RULE

Never release from a bank of fewer than six finished scenes. It costs about one week of editing to hold, and it is the only thing keeping the Saturday drop credible when illness, holidays or a reshoot eat a shooting day.

What a shoot day costs, and what it earns

Costs are modelled per shoot day, not per year, so the studio can flex cadence up or down and see the margin move immediately.

3	156	£87,360	585
4	208	£116,480	780

*Members required at £16 blended monthly ARPU to cover production cost alone, before platform, marketing and admin. The plan targets 900 members by the end of year two — roughly 1.5× the three-a-week breakeven.

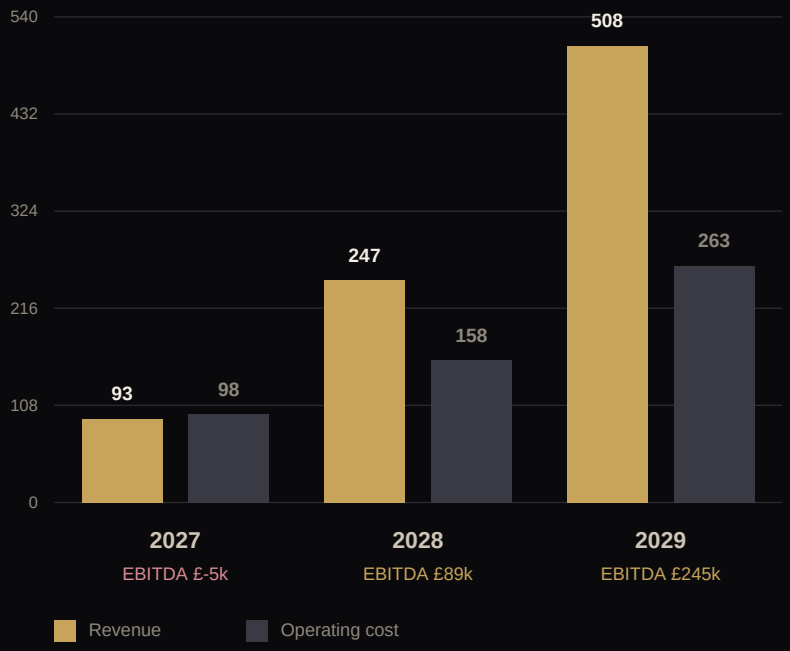

THE OPERATING RULE

Every extra shoot day costs £560 and returns roughly £1,810 at plan volume. The constraint is not demand — it is the anchor performer's sustainable working week, which is why four days is treated as the ceiling.

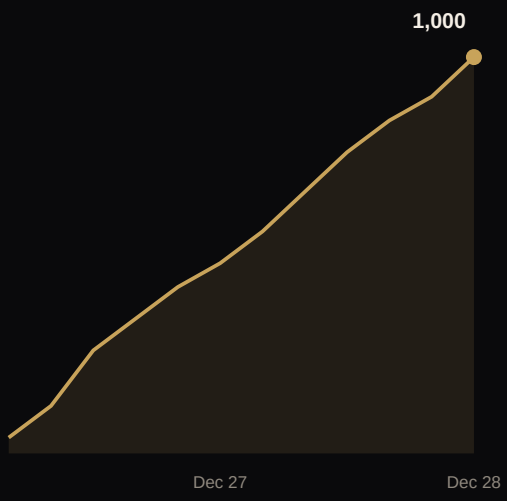

Three years to £0.5m

Base case: soft launch in December 2026, full three-a-week cadence from Q2 2027, prices held flat through 2027 with a small uplift at each anniversary.

Five ways one shoot day pays

Membership is the spine, but a single-performer catalogue is unusually good at selling the same footage repeatedly: to subscribers, to one-off buyers, to commissioners and to partners.

PRICING DISCIPLINE

The pricing ladder is deliberately simple: one price for the catalogue, one for the collector, and a pay-per-scene door for people who will never subscribe. No tier exists that cannibalises another.

Discovery is rented; audience is owned

Adult platforms will always control reach. The plan treats every social channel as a funnel into the one asset the studio actually owns: the email list and the membership base.

Cutdowns
468 clips a year across three channels

Site visit

CHANNEL PLAN

Vertical cutdowns	Discovery	3 / day
Email list	Conversion	2 / week
Partner networks	Licensing	Monthly
Press & interviews	Credibility	Monthly

THE ONE ASSET THAT COMPOUNDS

Every cutdown exists to move someone onto the list. A subscriber who has given an email address is worth roughly four times one who has not: they can be re-engaged after a lapse, sold a commission, and counted when a partner asks for reach.

WHY THE NUMBERS HOLD

Marketing spend stays under 9% of revenue because the release rhythm does most of the work: 468 cutdowns a year is a content engine, not an advertising budget.

The constraints are the moat

Most of the risk in this plan is not commercial — it is regulatory. Handling it early is what keeps card processing, hosting and distribution available.

NON-NEGOTIABLES

- Age assurance
  UK OSA-aligned measure at entry — verified card, digital ID or age estimation. Logged and reviewed quarterly.
- Performer records
  Photo ID, signed release and scene log for every shoot, retained for seven years.
- Consent & limits
  Agreed in writing. Stop-any-time policy. Footage withheld if consent is withdrawn.
- Payment processing
  Adult-friendly processor approved before public launch, with a published chargeback policy.
- Data protection
  UK GDPR basis for contact data. No ID documents by email. Encrypted storage.
- Content standards
  All performers 18+. No prohibited content. Territory restrictions documented.

RISK REGISTER

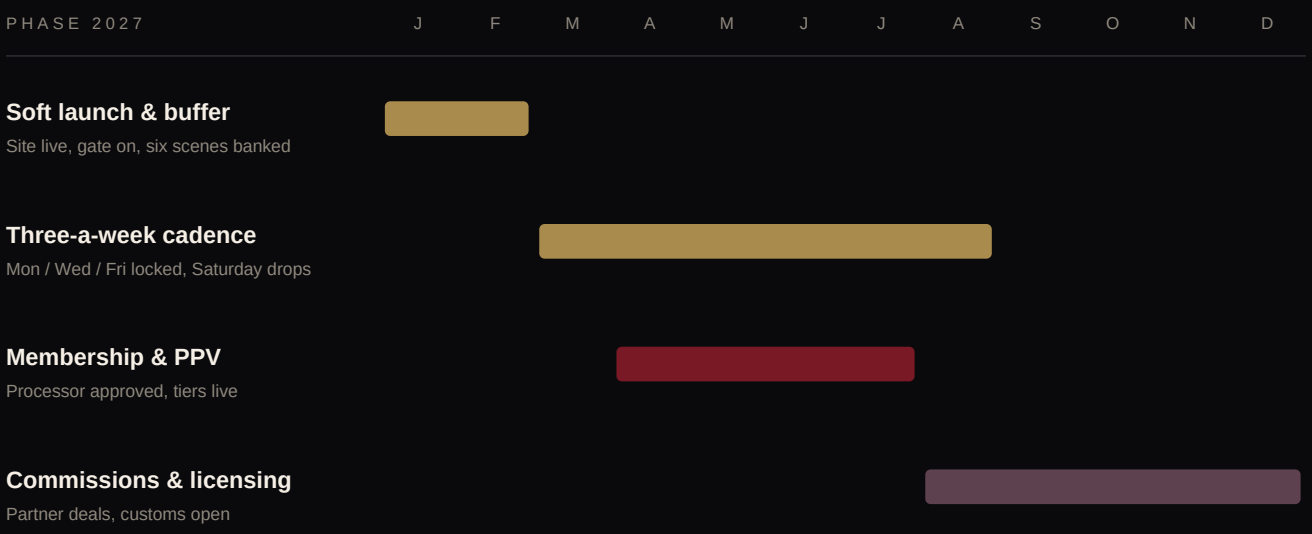

Risk	Impact	Mitigation
Single-performer dependency	High	Profit share, written exit
Cadence failure	High	Six-scene buffer, flex day
Processor withdrawal	High	Two processors, clean records
Platform reach cut	Medium	Owned email list from day one
Copycat pricing	Medium	Brand, not price, competition
Burnout	Medium	Four shoot days a week max

LAUNCH GATE

The site does not go public, and paid membership does not open, until four things are true: age assurance is live, the performer record folder is complete, a processor has approved the account, and a solicitor has reviewed the terms.

Twelve months, four gates

Sequenced so nothing is sold before it can be delivered, and nothing is public before it is compliant.

WHAT TO WATCH MONTHLY

Scenes released ≥ 13 / month The only non-negotiable	Buffer depth ≥ 6 scenes Protects the Saturday drop	New members ≥ 55 / month From month six
Month-2 retention ≥ 78% The real health metric	Blended ARPU ≥ £15 Price discipline	Cost per scene ≤ £600 Efficiency guardrail

Three shoots a week is not a slogan. It is the whole plan — and everything else in this document is downstream of hitting it.
